Cambridge, Ohio, 10/17/2017: Creature Weekend is proud to host the indie movie premiere of “Invasion on Chestnut Ridge” produced by Small Town Monsters. The movie will be shown at Salt Fork State Park Lodge at 7:30PM on October 21, 2017. Immediately following the movie premiere of “Invasion on Chestnut Ridge”, will be a rescreening of the movie, “Mothman of Point Pleasant” which was recently aired at the Mothman Festival in Point Pleasant, WV. Film maker and founder of “Small Town Monsters”, Seth Breedlove, will be present to discuss the production of “Invasion” his present and future projects. Mothman historian, Jeff Wamsley will also be present at the screening. Admission is free.

About “Invasion On Chestnut Ridge: From Small Town Monsters comes one of the most bizarre stories you'll ever encounter! The Chestnut Ridge in Pennsylvania is a region long shrouded in mystery. In the 1960s the small village of Kecksburg, PA was thrust into the spotlight when a purported UFO crashed in a nearby forest. Over the following years events in the region continued to unfurl that would stretch the boundaries of our reality. From Bigfoot-type creatures to unusual aerial events, the Chestnut Ridge played host to the strangest of the strange.
